Tired out after a midsummer night of mayhem and magic, Oberon and Puck go home.

But the Wood near Athens that they arrive in is not their wood. It is a 1930's Hollywood movie set, where Max Reinhardt, in America to get away from Hitler, is directing a Warner Bros film of A Midsummer Night's Dream.

The imperious King of the Fairies and his "shrewd and knavish sprite" quickly discover the possibilities in this "land of sequins and sin". The result, wrote Simon Reade, Artistic Director at Bristol Old Vic, is "high-jinx screwball comedy ... an accumulation of farcical mayhem ... poetic and political ...
